

CULTURAL COMMUNICATIONS INTERNSHIP

Flint Culture is an award-winning communications consultancy that specialises in the cultural and creative industries. We deliver campaigns worldwide through offices in London, Dubai, Istanbul and Delhi supported by an international network of Associates. Our work is driven by specialist expertise, regional insights and a belief in the value of culture.

Flint Culture prides itself on nurturing and developing talent and runs a quarterly internship scheme for budding communications professionals to join our London office. The scheme provides a platform for those who are passionate about arts, culture and heritage to gain a wide range of experience and insight into the workings of an integrated communications consultancy.

About the Role

Flint Culture's internship is primarily a training ground, with interns learning the key skills required to go into a communications role. Interns gain a basic understanding in media relations, client liaison, business development, and digital and social media campaigns as well as a clear working knowledge of a busy comms agency.

As well as a number of daily and weekly tasks, interns will work closely alongside account executives and account managers to deliver against a number of campaign objectives for approximately three campaigns across the three months, as well as ad hoc admin and research to support the agency as a whole.

Flint Culture endeavour to ensure the intern's personal interests are met wherever possible, and we encourage regular review meetings to ensure that all aspects of training are delivered.

Applications - Please send CV to Chantal Lane: chantal.lane@flint-culture.com with a short cover letter explaining your interest in working at Flint Culture and availability.
